DISTRICT OF CONNECTICUT ss.

BE it remembered, that on the twenty sixth day of March, in the twenty ninth year of the Independence of the United States of America, TIMOTHY OLMSTED, of the said district, hath deposited in this office, the title of a book, the right whereof he claims as author and proprietor, in the words following, (viz.)

"THE MUSICAL OLIO, containing, 1. A concise introduction to the art of singing by note. 2. A variety of Psalm tunes, Hymns and set pieces, selected, principally, from European authors, viz. Dr. Croft, Dr. Green, Handel, Purcell, Dr. Wainwright, Dr. Randal, Dr. Burney, Dr. Alcock, Is. Smith, Milgrove, Dr. Madan, Holdroyd, Williams, Baildon, Oswald, Jennings, Harrison, Grigg, Coombs, Tucker, Walker, Breillat, Husband, Dr. Worgan, Cuzen, Marsh, Boxwell, Dr. Arne, Lockhart, and Hepstinstall, together with a number of original pieces, never before published. Compiled and composed by T. OLMSTED."

In conformity to the act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An act for the encouragement of learning by securing the copies of maps, charts and books, to authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned."

A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

IN compiling this book of Sacred Music, great care has been taken, to select such tunes as must be useful to all Christian societies, that make singing, a part of public worship—The style and measure is suited to psalms and hymns generally made use of by worshipping assemblies ; and may with facility be changed from one to another of the same metre—By the sources from whence they are derived, and by the sanction of those great authorities, I am authorized to be sanguine in the opinion, that what I have compiled, hath real merit, and will be highly approved, by all who possess good taste and judgment. The pieces given out in my name, if noticed, must speak for themselves. I have been importuned by many of my acquaintance, to insert more of them than I intended ; but to the public I now submit their trial and fate.

To render this book convenient for schools, I have laid down the rules plain and concise, and arranged the lessons in such order as will make it easy for the teacher to give his pupils a just idea of the use of the musical characters.—As the modern European authors have furnished us with many excellent pieces of music in three parts ; the air placed for the female voice ; and as that custom is prevailing, I have adhered to it in part. Some publishers of Psalmody have exploded the Alto, or counter-tenor, and in their stead substituted second trebles ; others have published in three parts only ; objections have been made to each of those methods singly. To obviate which I have inserted some tunes in three parts, and some in four ; some with counters, and some with second trebles. Part of the airs are placed for the tenor voice, and part for the female voice—all of which I have thought best to print in characters universally made use of ; having not as yet been made to perceive the utility of the simplifications, and new inventions ; which are so frequently presented us for our improvement, by many of our modern masters ;—These characters are not only our old acquaintance, but that of the whole musical world ; in which all nations can read, and probably never will discard. The instrumental performer may now join with the vocal, and find music in familiar key and good style.—

That this small volume may prove to be useful in the Church, and entertaining in the Chamber, is the ardent wish of

LESSON III.

A BRACE, encloses so many staves as are sung together.

FLAT, Set before a note, sinks it half a tone.

SHARP, set before a note, raises it half a tone.

NATURAL, Restores a note made flat or sharp to its primitive sound.

When a flat, sharp or natural is prefixed to any note in the course of a piece, it affects all the following notes of the same name, contained in the same bar, but no further. In that case they are called accidental.

SLUR, Is drawn over or under so many notes as are sung to one syllable.

SINGLE BAR, Divides the time into equal proportions.

DOUBLE BAR, Marks the end of a strain, and when dotted, signifies a repeat.

THE DOT, Placed after any note, makes it half as long again.

THE PAUSE, Denoting that the note over which it is placed, is to be drawn out to a length greater than its own, at pleasure of the performer.

REPEAT, denotes a repetition of that part of the piece standing between where they are placed.

FIGURE 3, Placed over or under three notes, they are performed one third quicker.

LEDGER LINE, — Is drawn through notes that ascend, or descend beyond the staff.

STACCATO MARK, Denotes a distinct and pointed manner of performance.

DIRECT, Placed at the end of a staff, to point to the first note in the next.

FIGURES 1 & 2, Show a double ending of a strain or tune, and that the note under figure 1 is performed before the repeat, that under 2 after; but if flurried both must be sounded.

CLOSE, Shows the end of a tune.

CHOOSING NOTES, Either may be sung.

LESSON IV.

Time.

There are in Music two sorts of Time, Common and Triple. Common Time is divided by an even number of beats between each single bar, as 2, and 4. Triple Time, by odd numbers, or threes. These Times are indicated by certain signs, or figures placed at the beginning of the staff.

Signs of Common Time.

First Mood,  Contains one semibreve, or that quantity in other notes or rests, in a bar, which is commonly sounded four seconds, or beats in that time; beating two down and two up. Minim, crotchet, &c. in that proportion.

Second,  Hath the same measure note, beat in the same manner, but one third quicker.

Third,  or thus  Hath a semibreve for its measure note, held two seconds, or beats, one down, one up; in time as the first mood.

Fourth,  Contains one minim in a bar, which is held two beats, one down, one up, in time as the second mood.

Signs of Triple Time.

First Mood,  Contains three minims in a bar, two beat down and one up; in, or about the time of three seconds.

Second,  Contains 2 crotchets in a bar, beat as the first mood, about one third quicker.

Third,  Contains 3 quavers in a bar, beat in the same manner; but one third quicker.

I shall lay down and explain but two more Moods of Time; which, by some modern English authors, are denominated Common Time; by others, Compound Triple Time. I am inclined to the latter, on account of the accent falling upon the first of each three notes, or the first and fourth in the bar.

First Mood,  Containing 6 crotchets in a bar; the first three beat down the 2d up; the motion rather slower than that of the Third Mood of Common Time.

Second,  Containing 6 quavers in a bar, beat as above; but about one third quicker.

By those signs and directions, I have endeavoured to ascertain the velocity of the pieces of Music contained in this Book; but if the capable teacher, or good judge of Music should think proper to vary in some instances, no rule is so absolute as to forbid it: the style, and spirit of the composition require it in many instances, and words are often placed to vary the velocity of the movement, from that given by the sign.

LESSON V. Of the Graces in Music.

The turn,

Back Turn.

Passing Shake.

Beat.

Appoggiature.

Transition.

Whatever time is occupied by the Appoggiature, Transition or any other grace so much time is taken from the note it embellishes; so that the time of the whole bar is not augmented.

Of Syncopation.

Syncopation is a term applied to that disposition of the melody, or Harmony, of a composition, by which the last note of one bar is so connected with the first note of the succeeding bar, as to form but one and the same sound; or those notes which are driven out of their proper order in the bar, and require the hand to rise, or fall while such notes are sounding.

Example.

Common Time explained.

Simple Triple Time, explained.

Compound Triple Time, explained.

The Octave, or Eight Notes, with the Intervals displayed.

Tenor and Treble Cliff. Key of G.

Bass Cliff.

THE Major Mode is that division of the octave, by which the intervals between the third and fourth, and seventh and eighth, become half tones.—The Minor Mode is that division by which the intervals between the second and third, and fifth and sixth, become half tones. Another distinction also exists between the Major and Minor Modes: the Major Mode is the same both ascending and descending; but the Minor Mode in ascending sharpens the sixth and seventh, thereby removing the half tone from between the fifth and sixth to the 7th and 8th.

Of Accent.

ACCENT, is what every composer and teacher of music ought to study, with great care and attention; there can be no music without accent, "because without it there can be no expression." That part of the bar is said to be accented, on which the emphasis or expression naturally falls. In common time of four crotchets in a bar, the accentuation will fall on the first and third crotchets of the bar; in that of two crotchets, it will fall on the first only; but if a bar is made of semiquavers, the first of each four must be accented; which is a greater stress of voice on those parts of the bar above mentioned.—In simple triple time, the accentuation will fall on the first note of the bar; in compound triple time, the first of each three must be accented.—The Swell, on notes of considerable length, is very important and ornamental. Singers should be very carefully instructed how to perform it; which is done by beginning with a moderate sound, increasing to the middle of the note, then decreasing to the end. It is supposed that the teacher will be able to point out the important, emphatical words which require the use of it, and in what degree beyond the ordinary swell; that the words and music may have their intended effect.—Scarce any note in music ought to be struck upon hard, or begun with as much force as it requires before terminated; the sound of every note should be increased and diminished in some degree, unless they are so short as to render it unnecessary, or impossible—arriving gracefully to a note, is a delicate point of performance, a true idea of which may be given by example, but not easily by precept.

Of Musical Expression.

EXPRESSION, as defined by an eminent English author, is "that quality in a composition or performance, from which we receive a kind of sentimental appeal to our feelings, and which constitutes one of the first of musical requisites." The term expression, may be applied to the accent and swell of particular notes, as well as to such passages, and strains in a composition, as require to be performed in a manner expressive of the sentiment.—Words and sentences to which music is set in the sublime and lofty style, ought by no means to be passed over in the ordinary or common way; but the performer should enter into the spirit of the subject, and endeavour to give it due expression. Strict attention should also be paid to the performance of pieces or movements in the brisk and animated style. But the most delicate, if not the most difficult style to perform, is the tender and affectionate; termed by the Italians Affettuoso. It is impossible for such strains to have strict justice done them by the unfeeling, or those who are not susceptible of the intended impression, many a tender and melting air hath been received with indifference, and wholly lost its effect by being performed by those of that description, or by those who were not sensible of, or had not studied the subject. Any teacher of music who allows his pupils to pass over strains in the sublime, the sprightly and animated, or the gentle, tender and affectionate style undistinguished by due expression, is as unpardonable, and must be considered as much deficient in capacity as those who disregard the Chromatic parts of a composition, and to note the notes intended to be varied by flats, sharps and naturals set before them, the same as though they had not been placed there. The best modulated, best harmonized pieces of music are turned into the worst, when they are performed without expression, and with false tonation.

Of Articulation.

ARTICULATION, is very important in vocal performance; it applies to words and to notes; "and includes that distinctness and accuracy of expression, which gives every syllable and sound with truth and perspicuity, and forms the very foundation of pathos and grace." It is certainly most pleasing to an auditory, to hear singers speak the words distinct, and as clearly to be understood as the laws and customs of musical performance will possibly admit of, whatever may be the fashion of the times. Affecation, in speaking words, and sounding notes in imitation of theatrical performers, is making its way among our singers of divine songs and hymns; which is very improper and disgusting. Sacred music does, or ought to differ in style from that of Comic Operas, as much as the words to which it is set; so indeed, should the manner of performing it.

Of Pronunciation.

A TRUE, and proper pronunciation of words and syllables, according to the established rules of modern grammarians, is highly essential, and ought to be very particularly attended to, and inculcated by every teacher of vocal Music. As our schools for reading are so improved, and literary refinements diffused so generally, as to reach even the most obscure villages and districts; it is not supposable that any one ignorant of the fashionable, genteel manner of pronunciation, will offer themselves, or find employment, as teachers of reading or Music—Therefore it seems unnecessary to be minute in this particular. It may however, be proper to observe, that many who think themselves well versed in pronunciation, when singing, are apt to sound certain letters too narrow or sharp; as for instance, the letter O like A, when it should always be sounded round and full. The letter A, which hath ~~two~~ different sounds, viz. broad, short and long, when used in certain words, is too often sounded in that sharp, or narrow way, especially long A. The letter E is another, variable in sound, and must never be drawn out long and sharp. The article the, should generally be sounded thē. Monosyllables terminating in y, as thy, my, &c. may be sounded thoy, moy, or moi, and render the music more pleasing. At the end of words of more than one syllable, y must be sounded as e. Many particulars more might be mentioned; but I leave them to the taste and judgment of the teacher, and the performer.

THE definition of the word effect, given by Dr. Busby, in his Musical Dictionary, is a very good hint to all of us who have been eager to appear as composers of Music, and may continue to be affected with a disorder (if it may be so termed) called the itch for composition. Being an endemic of New-England; it is recommended to those who have it, or begin to feel the symptoms, to read the following.

"EFFECT.—That impression which a composition makes on the ear and mind in performance. To produce a good effect, real genius, profound science, and a cultivated judgment, are indispensable requisites. So much does the true value of all music depend on its effect, that it is to this quality every candidate for fame as a musical author should unceasingly attend. The most general mistake of composers in their pursuit of this great object is, the being more solicitous to load their scores with numerous parts and powerful combinations, than to produce originality, purity, and sweetness of melody, and to enrich and enforce their ideas by that happy contrast of vocal or instrumental tones, and timely relief of fulness and simplicity, which give light and shade to the whole; and by their picturesque impression, delight the ear and interest the feelings." It would be well for us to consider, reflect and enquire, in what degree our musical compositions possess those qualities.

Let the composer, the professor of music, and the amateur, study the works of the great ancient and modern European masters, so attentively as to become well acquainted with their style, modulation, combination of harmonizing sounds; their succession, their periods or cadences; the pleasing effect they have upon the ear and mind of the hearer, who hath "music in his soul," and can be "moved by concord of sweet sounds:" I say let them read, and hear, so as to become sensible of their effect or energy, and I presume that some of the publishers would be cautious in future of presenting any more of their volumes, fraught with such useless, insipid trash, as hath been poured out upon the public from almost every corner—They would have had so much regard for those volumes of music heretofore published by our present respectable masters, as to have studied, practised, and learned how to perform what they contain; in that way they might have made themselves useful, and obliged the musical part of the world, by stopping the circulation of such compositions as have vitiated the taste of a great part of those whom we depend on to perform that delightful, and important part of public worship, viz. singing songs of praise to the Creator. By means of a certain class of composers and teachers of psalmody, the greater part of our young singers have got a distrelish for grave, solid and substantial music, and are unwilling to receive and attend to the practice and use of any pieces but those set in the third mood of common time, and which jingle with fuges sufficient to cut them into pieces, and make an entire jumble of the poetry. A good Fugue, or Fuge, is very important, and has a powerful effect in certain cases; but carried to excess, becomes disgusting:—The myriads of fugging tunes buzzing or humming about our ears are copies and imitations of J. STEPHENSON, of England, and WM. BILLINGS, of N. America: it is hopeful that some other model will appear ere long.

Explanation of a few Musical Terms, necessary to be understood.

ADAGIO, Slow, with grace and embellishment.

Affettuoso, Tender and affecting, requiring a soft and delicate style of performance.

Air, The leading part, the tune; to which the other parts are made to harmonize.

A, in Alt, The second note in alt, the ninth above the G, or Treble and Tenor Cliff.

Allegro, Gay, quick.

Alt, A term applied to that part of the great scale of sounds which lies between F above the treble cliff-note, and G in Altissimo.

Alto, In scores signifies the counter-tenor part.

Altissimo, Applied to all notes situated above F in alt, i. e. those notes which are more than an octave above F on the fifth line in the G cliff.

Andante, Implies a time somewhat slow, and a performance distinct and exact, gentle, tender and soothing.

BEAT, A beat, is a transient grace note, struck immediately before the note it is intended to ornament.

Beating Time, Is that motion of the hand or foot, used by the performers themselves, or some person presiding over the concert, to specify, mark, and regulate the measure of the movements.

CADENCE, A pause or suspension at the end of an air, to afford the performer an opportunity of introducing a graceful extempore close.

Character, A general name for any musical sign

Chord, A term given to united harmonious sounds.

Chorus, Two, three, four, or more parts, sung by a plurality of voices.

Concord, An union of two or more sounds, which by their harmony produce an agreeable effect upon the ear.

Con Spirito, With spirit.

Crescendo, A term signifying that the notes of the passage over which it is placed, are to be gradually swelled.

DA CAPO, To the head, or beginning, directing the performer to return to, and end with, the first strain.

Dirge, A solemn and mournful composition performed on funeral occasions.

Diminuendo, Gradually lessen the sound.—The opposite of Crescendo.

Dolce, A term signifying that the movement, or passage over which it is placed, must be sung or played in a soft sweet style.

Double, Notes below G gamut, are called double, as F, E, D, C, below the bass stave, are double F, double E, &c.

Duet, A composition expressly written for two voices or instruments, with or without a bass and accompaniments.

EXPRESSIVO. A term, indicating that the movement or passage over which it is placed, is to be performed with expression.

FORTE, Loud, used in opposition to Piano.

Fortissimo, Very loud, the superlative of Forte.

Fugue, A composition in which one part leads off some determined succession of notes called the subject, which, after being answered in the fifth and eighth by the other parts, is interspersed through the movement, and distributed amid all the parts in a desultory manner at the pleasure of the composer.

G GAMMUT, The first G below the bass-cliff note.

Grace, or Graces, The general name given to those occasional embellishments which a performer introduces, to heighten the effect of a composition.

Grave, Slower than Largo, but not so slow as Adagio.

INTERVAL, The difference in point of gravity or acuteness between any two sounds.

♫ KEY, or Key-note, With theorists a certain fundamental note or tone, to which the whole of a movement has a certain relation or bearing, to which all its modulations are referred and accommodated, and in which it both begins and ends. There are but two species of keys; one of the major, and one of the minor mode; all the keys in which we employ sharps or flats being deduced from the natural keys of C major, and A minor, of which indeed, they are only transpositions.

LARGO, One degree quicker than Grave, and two degrees quicker than Adagio.

MAESTOSO, A word implying that the composition or movement to which it is prefixed, is to be performed with dignity and majesty.

Major, An epithet applied to that of the two modern modes in which the third is four semitones the tonic or key-note. Those intervals which contain the greatest number of semitones under the same denomination, are also called Major; as a third consisting of four semitones instead of three only, is termed a Major-third; a sixth containing nine semitones instead of eight, is called a Major-sixth.

Measure, That division of the time by which the air and motion of music is regulated.

OCTAVE, An interval containing seven degrees, or twelve semitones, and which is the first of the Consonances in the order of generation.

PIANO, Soft. In opposition to Forte, loud and strong.

N. B. It was intended to have a number of Anthems in this publication; but as provision was made for only 112 pages, and that found not more than sufficient to contain such a variety of Psalm Tunes as would be necessary for schools, I thought best to omit them: if another edition should be called for, it will be enlarged so as to contain as much, or more music, than was at first contemplated.

ERRATA.—Page 87, 8th bar from the close, on the Bass of ALBANY, the minim on D should be on E.

Pitch, The acuteness or gravity of any particular sound, or of the tuning of any instrument.
Primo, First.

RESPONSE, In a fugue, the response is the repetition of the given subject in another part.

Rondeau, A composition generally consisting of three strains, the first of which closes in the original key; while each of the others is so constructed in point of modulation as to reconduct the ear in an easy and natural manner to the first strain.

SICILIANA, Is applied to movements the style of which is simple, and the effect at once tender, soothing and pastoral.

SIGNS, The general name for all the different characters used in music: as sharps, flats, repeats, pauses, dots, directs, &c.

Solo, A composition for a single voice or instrument.

Staccato, A word signifying that the notes of the passage over which it is written, are to be performed in a short, pointed, and distinct manner.

Strain, A word applied to those successive parts of a composition into which it is divided by double bars.

UNISON, The union of two sounds so directly similar to each other in respect of gravity, or acuteness, that the ear perceiving no difference, receives them as one and the same.

VIVACE, A word signifying that the movement to which it is prefixed, is to be sung, or played, in a brisk and animated style.
